Here’s what our Faculty and Grad Students have been up to:

Janet Wasko participated in various ways at the International Association for Media & Communication Research (IAMCR) Conference in Dublin, Ireland, June 25-29, including sharing the stage with the President of Ireland during his memorable opening address. Janet also made two invited presentations at the INTERCOM conference in Manaus, Brazil, Sept. 3-7.

Matthew Pittman’s paper, “Thou Shalt Kill…Carefully: The religious function of Dexter’s killing ritual”, will be presented at the 99th annual convention of the National Communication Association in Washington D.C. in November 2013. At that NCA convention he is also presenting a paper he wrote with William J. Brown & Terrence R. Lindvall, “Encomium Colbert: Connecting Stephen Colbert to Erasmic Catholicism”, at the Religious Communication Association panel.

Laurie Phillips, new faculty member in Public Relations, completed her dissertation, “A Multi-method Examination of Race, Class, Gender, Sexual Orientation, and Motivations for Participation in the YouTube-based ‘It Gets Better Project,’” this summer and received her doctorate in Mass Communication from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She recently published an article in the October 2013 issue of NCA’s Communication Currents and will be presenting research at the October 2013 Association of Internet Researchers (AoIR) conference in Denver and the November 2013 Texas Social Media Research Institute (TSMRI) conference in Fort Worth, TX, the latter of which she is a fellow.

Peter Laufer’s book “The Elusive State of Jefferson: A Journey through the 51st State” was published as supervisors in California counties Siskiyou and Modoc voted to secede from the Golden State and invited southern Oregon counties to join them, a timely reiteration of movement that Laufer traces back to 1854. Just before the fall term began he returned from the Bolivian Chaco where he was completing research for his book on the provenance of foodstuff labeled organic. Over the summer his articles on the endangered Desert Tortoise, crowdsourcing and slow news were published in The Tortoise, Gutenberg University's Journalism and Media Convergence, and Catamaran Literary Reader, respectively.

Kim Sheehan had the 2nd edition of her popular book, “Controversies in Contemporary Advertising” published in August. This edition features a heightened focus on international and digital media, and includes a range of case studies illustrating various topics. It may also be the first book with a ‘highlighter yellow’ cover.

He also had an article entitled “Subjective Norms as a Driver of Mass Communication Students’ Intentions to Adopt New Media Production Technologies” accepted for publication by Journalism and Mass Communication Educator.

Alina Padilla-Miller will be presenting “Project MyVoice: Expanding Citizen Access to Media” at UDC (Union for Democratic Communications) November 1-3 2013, San Francisco.

Scott Maier presented a study at the AEJMC convention in Washington, D.C. His study examines reporting techniques by New York Times columnist Nicholas Kristof to overcome compassion fatigue when covering genocide and other mass atrocity.
Erica Ciszek and Tiffany Gallicano published studies in the diversity issue of the Public Relations Journal. PRSA included a link to Tiffany’s study this week in the email promotion of its monthly newspaper, Tactics.

Tiffany Gallicano, Kevin Brett (MA 2012), and Toby Hopp published an article entitled “Is Ghost Blogging Like Speechwriting? A Survey of Practitioners About the Ethics of Ghost Blogging” in Public Relations Journal. The Institute for Public Relations has selected their study for inclusion in the Social Science of Social Media Research Center.

Tiffany Gallicano, Tom Bivins, and Yoon Cho (PhD 2012) contributed a chapter about ghost blogging and ghost commenting to a book about social media ethics. Kati Berg (Ph.D. 2006) and Kim Sheehan also contributed a chapter about social media as a CSR channel. The book will be available in December and contains a foreword by Brian Solis.

Christopher Chavez is co-editor with Brian Goss of the book “Beyond Tradition and McWorld Neoliberalism,” which was released this summer.

Connie Chandler’s paper, “Exploring the Relevance of Relationship Management Theory to Investor Relations,” will be presented at the Roundtable on Research in Progress during the NCA 99th Annual Convention to be held Nov 21 - 24, 2013, in Wash. D.C. In addition, her paper, “Investor Relations from the Perspective of CEOs,” has been accepted in the International Journal of Strategic Communication’s special issue on Financial Strategic Communication to be published in July 2014.

Jon Palfreman is back from sabbatical. While away he has been writing a book about the neuroscience of Parkinson’s disease for Scientific American, Farrar, Strauss, Giroux. He was also appointed as Social Media Editor of the Journal of Parkinson’s Disease, where he writes a blog. In addition, Jon is making a series of three films for Google about the story of women in the history of computers.

Leslie Steeves received a Dean’s grant to collaborate with doctoral student Senyo Ofori-Parku (ABD) to research the dialogue around Jungle Gold, a Discovery Channel reality show featuring Americans engaged in illegal and environmentally toxic surface mining in rural Ghana. Ofori-Parku traveled to Ghana this summer to gather data for the project. Steeves will show her film, “Give a Laptop, Change the World,” edited by André Sirois (PhD 2011), at the Union for Democratic Communications Conference in San Francisco Oct. 31-Nov. 2.

Jher’s invited workshop/talk, “Analogue–Digital–Virtual–Physical Media: Convergence to Emergence,” at the Huston School of Film & Digital Media (National University of Ireland, Galway) was well attended. The director of the school, professor Rod Stoneman, emailed his appreciation noting that it was both “stimulating and engaging.” This experience was the middle ground between his accepted paper and panel presentations at both ICA (London, England) & IAMCR (Dublin, Ireland) 2013.
Kyu Ho Youm has been busy! His Brigham Young University Law Review article of 2012, “Cameras in the Courtroom in the Twenty-First Century: The U.S. Supreme Court Learning from Abroad?” is being translated into Chinese. His article was noted in the New York Times article of Feb. 19, 2013, “Bucking a Trend, Supreme Court Justices Reject Video Coverage.” He delivered the keynote speech at the “Social Media, Regulation and Freedom of Expression: A comparative perspective” conference at Hong Kong Baptist University in May.

Also in May, he gave lectures at the Communication University of China (CCU) in Beijing on “Current Issues in American Media Law” and at the National University of Singapore (NUS) on “Convergence of Libel Law: Is the U.K. Defamation Act 2013 Resembling the U.S. First Amendment.”

He participated in the media law forum with Chinese scholars and lawyers at Tsinghua University.

He spoke at the City Club of Eugene on “Right to Privacy in the NSA Era: The Snowden Impact in the U.S. and Abroad” on Oct. 4, 2013. On Sept. 30, he completed his yearlong term as President of the Association for Education in Journalism and Mass Communication (AEJMC). The AEJMC business meeting during the AEJMC convention in D.C. in August adopted a resolution unanimously: “In recognition of Kyu Youm’s exceptional leadership of AEJMC this past year, including this conference which he was unable to attend, be it resolved that AEJMC thanks and commends him for his immense global contributions as a leader in journalism/mass communication education and practice.”

Carol Stabile’s article, “I Will Own You: Accountability in Massively Multiplayer Online Games” appeared in the June issue of Television and New Media. She will present a paper, “Reporters, Guns and Money: Suicide Spikes, Mass Shootings, and Social Responsibility,” at the American Studies Association Conference in Washington, D.C. in November.

Lori Howell is presenting at the Nonprofit Network Annual Conference on November 4. The topic of her presentation is “Working with Elected Officials: How to Build Relationships with Policymakers that Help You and Your Community.”

Ed Madison is overseeing an after-school program for high school students at the SOJC called JUMP—Journalism University Mentorship Program. Every Monday current SOJC students and graduates mentor a small group of high school students from Eugene’s public and private high schools in journalism and nonfiction storytelling. Participants will produce their own general interest magazine while learning the basics of writing, reporting, copy editing, interviewing, information gathering, photography, media ethics, page design, and publishing. The magazine will be distributed to 10,000-15,000 households in late November/early December and again in spring with distribution support from the Eugene Register-Guard. Maya Lazaro coordinates the program. The JUMP program is also a source of research data for Madison, who studies journalism pedagogy and its alignment with new Common Core State Standards in English language arts. Madison’s work centers on identifying scalable models for strengthening ties between university journalism programs and secondary schools to enhance college- and career-readiness among high school students. In addition to observing JUMP for this research project, Madison will be studying an immersive week-long multimedia course offered at Roosevelt High School in Portland, Oregon that will take place in spring of 2014. The Portland course focuses on mentorship of Roosevelt’s diverse and underserved student population as they capture community oriented multimedia stories. It is funded by a grant from the Wayne Morse Law Center.

Gregory Gondwe’s article, “Micheal Jackson in the African lenses: Introspective his visual and Oral Aesthetics”, has been accepted for publication in the Visual Communication Quarterly journal.
Josh Netzer has been asked to deliver a presentation on “Effective Utilization of College Internship Programs for Low-Cost Employee Recruitment” at the MPACE 2013 Conference, December 11 – 13 in Phoenix, AZ.

Arnold Ismach, dean of the school from 1985 to 1994, was included in the new edition of Who’s Who In America. It is the 20th consecutive year of his inclusion.

Notable Alumni News:

Joy Chavez Mapaye (Ph.D. 2010) and UAA Public Health Assistant Professor Gabriel Garcia were awarded a $133,000 subaward from the American Lung Association in Alaska from the State of Alaska Department of Health and Social Services Tobacco Prevention and Control Community Grant Program. Garcia and Mapaye are tasked with implementing a research/media/advocacy campaign to make the University of Alaska Anchorage campus 100% smoke-free by 2015. Garcia and Mapaye, along with UAA Psychology Assistant Professor E.J. David and two undergraduate students will also present their paper on “Health among Asians and Pacific Islanders in Urban and Rural Alaska” at the Alaska Health Summit in Anchorage in January 2014.

Kathleen M. Ryan (Ph.D. 2008) (director) and David Staton (producer)’s film “Homefront Heroines: The WAVES of World War II” is an official selection of the San Pedro International Film Festival. The film screened on October 6th at 1:00pm. The film is based in part on research Ryan did for her Ph.D.

Jane Marcellus (Ph.D. 2004) was promoted to full professor at Middle Tennessee State University. She also has a new book, co-authored with Erika Engstrom (UNLV), Tracy Lucht (Iowa State), and Kimberly Wilmot Voss (Central Florida). The book is titled “Mad Men and Working Women: Feminist Perspectives on Historical Power, Resistance, and Otherness” (forthcoming from Peter Lang, 2014). In chapters aimed at helping readers understand women’s lives in the 1960s, Mad Men is used as a springboard to offer historical insight for thinking about serious issues that “modern” working women continue to face today: balancing their work and personal lives, competing with other women, and controlling their own bodies and reproductive choices.

Not research, but...

The SOJC welcomed a veritable bevy of BABIES this year!
